The focus within the course is placed firmly on applications of mathematics to real-life contexts and the formulation and interpretation of mathematical models. The course offers depth of applied mathematical experience and, thereby, achieves relevance to further study or employment in the areas of mathematical and physical sciences and engineering. When an Advanced Higher Mathematics of Mechanics course is taken in addition to the Advanced Higher Mathematics course, an opportunity is offered for the candidate to acquire exceptional breadth and depth of mathematical experiences.
Assessment	This course consists of three mandatory units with unit assessments, a prelim and a final exam.
Materials Required	Textbook 'Understanding Mechanics' by Sadler & Thorning.

Entry Requirements	A Higher Modern Studies pass at A or B is desired. Entrance to the course is at the discretion of the department.
Course Content	The overall theme of the course is 'Law and Order and Research Methods' and comprises two units, one of 80 hours and one of 40 hours as outlined below: Unit 1: Social Issues: Law and Order and Research Methods Context A: Understanding criminal behaviour This includes; The nature and extent of criminal behaviour, evaluation of theories of criminal behaviour and the social and economic effects of criminal behaviour. Context B: Responses by society to crime This includes; Theories and explanations of responses to crime, current responses to crime and evaluation of responses to crime. Unit 2 – Researching Contemporary Issues This unit will allow the pupil to carry out independent research on the content of a unit studied at Higher or Advanced Higher in Modern Studies. The pupil will develop the investigative skills of planning, researching, analysing and presenting through the production of a 4500 word dissertation for which part of the research must involve a primary method.
Assessment	To gain a full award for the course, pupils must achieve all the component units of the course (internally assessed) as well as the external assessment. The external assessment comprises of an externally set and assessed question paper and the dissertation. In addition, pupils must pass internal assessments throughout the course relating to the content and research methods related to the main study theme (Unit 1) and practical research methods (Unit 2).
Materials Required	A ring binder, folder and A4 paper. Pupils need access to the internet as we use Google Classroom a lot and they also need to be able to print articles and handouts as there is a lot of reading.
